A new landscape for learning

Academic standards, learning-focused concepts and assessment competencies can be taught with the newspaper. Turn the newspaper into a dynamic, interactive teaching tool for your students with the E-editions!

Go green

The Bucks County Courier Times, the Burlington County Times and The Intelligencer multi-media digital editions provide all the news of the day, without using any paper. It's the environmentally-friendly way to stay informed.

The digital editions of the newspaper are exact replicas of the daily newspapers. With internet access students can read them on a computer, where you can see all the text and pictures, plus you can save, print, send, or listen to articles with the click of a button. It's easy to move through pages and sections, and you can search for keywords to find a specific topic, person or event. It's simple and convenient. You can even review archived issues from the past 30 days!

The goal of Newspaper In Education (NIE) is to reach students and provide quality information to improve literacy and basic skills, develop lifelong learning, and promote citizenship. As the younger generation seeks to be connected at all times, it is vital to reach them with current information at the time and place and in the format of their choosing. Calkins Media is committed to providing news in formats that are relevant to local students. Online digital editions are available to all classrooms at no cost through the NIE Sponsorship Program. E-editions can be used effectively in classrooms on individual computers, as well as with larger groups via SMARTBoards. Apps are also available for the i-Phone, i-Pad and i-Pad Touch. E-editions help engage young people with reliable, up-to-date information and allow them to stay informed in an environmentally-friendly format.
